Senator Mark Udall will Visit Mi Casa to Meet with Staff, Job Training Participants

March 30, 2010 (DENVER) – On Wednesday, March 31, Senator Mark Udall will visit Mi Casa Resource Center to talk with staff and job training participants about what Congress can do to help get unemployed Coloradans back into the workforce. The Senator will tour Mi Casa’s main Denver facility on Acoma Street, meet with members of Mi Casa’s leadership team, and conclude by conducting a town hall meeting with Mi Casa’s vocational training students, staffers and board members from 10:15 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Mi Casa’s friends from Univision, VIVA Colorado, La Voz Nueva de Colorado, Azteca Colorado, and El Semanario are invited to attend this event, which is not open to the public – only to Mi Casa constituents and staff.

Senator Udall is visiting Mi Casa as part of his Workforce Tour of Colorado, which includes other vocational training programs along the Front Range that provide Coloradans with skills and resources to find lasting employment in growth industries that offer strong earning and advancement potential. Through training and job placement assistance in green energy, sustainable construction, energy-efficiency and bilingual financial services, Mi Casa helps displaced workers to find their footing in the Colorado economy.

“We are delighted Senator Udall is visiting Mi Casa to hear about the important work we are doing to put low-income families back to work in these tough economic times,” says Christine Marquez-Hudson, Executive Director. “Mi Casa is proud of the success we have had in helping people advance their education and launch new and promising careers in high-growth industries.”
